Healthy Caribbean Coalition
Media campaign in support of the United Nations High Level Meeting, September 2011.
“Get the Message”
On 18th March 2011 the Healthy Caribbean Coalition launched a civil society led Health Revolution: a text based Social and Traditional Media Communication Advocacy Campaign to inform people of the Region about chronic diseases and their risk factors, and support Caribbean Leaders at the United Nations High Level Meeting (UNHLM) on chronic disease, September 2011.

Objective.
The campaign seeks to mobilize and empower Caribbean people by better informing them of chronic diseases and associated risk factors. It aims to indicate support for Caribbean leaders at the UNHLM with the goals of impressing on them the need to aggressively address the common disease risk factors of tobacco exposure, excessive alcohol, unhealthy diet and physical inactivity; and the re-structuring of health systems to deal effectively with healthcare for chronic noncommunicable diseases.

United Nations High Level Summit.
This event was triggered by Heads of Government of the Caribbean. It is a once in a lifetime opportunity to focus world attention on a group of diseases which account for 60% of deaths world-wide and have an enormous economic and development impact throughout the world. The goal of the Summit is to increase funding and improve prevention and treatment of chronic diseases globally.

Healthy Caribbean Coalition.
The Healthy Caribbean Coalition is a Caribbean network of health non governmental organizations and other civil society organizations established to combat chronic diseases throughout the Caribbean region.

The “Get the Message” campaign.
The campaign was launched by the Healthy Caribbean Coalition and its regional media partners, service provid- ers, health insurance providers with PAHO/WHO providing technical assistance on the 18 March 2011 and will end on Radio, television and newspaper advertisements will be placed at regular intervals in the media of Associate Member and Member States of the Caribbean Community of Countries (CARICOM) where possible and considered strategic. These advertisements will have 3 components; lifestyle/chronic disease information, request to text support for the UNHLM, and logos and names of the supporters of the campaign. Advertisements will also be placed on the Healthy Caribbean Coalition website and that of member and supporting organizations.

The campaign will use viral marketing with the support of internationally recognized Caribbean entertainers.

Using a combination of new media approaches, telephone service providers will advertise the campaign and seek indications of support, principally through short code text messages.

Telephone service providers will offer their cell phone customers an opportunity to receive daily health tips about lifestyles, risk factors and chronic diseases.

Telephone service providers will initiate actions and use opportunities in their usual and customary communicating, marketing and promoting efforts to promote and seek indications of support for the Summit from their customers. The Healthy Caribbean Coalition will use its website and that of its member organizations, Facebook and Twitter to advertise and “create a buzz” about the campaign.

Text messages of support at organization and country level will be actively solicited using the Healthy Caribbean Coalition network of members and supporters. The lead member organizations of the Coalition in each Caribbean country will be given a target of text messages for his/her country.

A count of endorsement text messages, and other responses will be carried out and the results made available at regular intervals over the course of the campaign.

The campaign will be monitored and evaluated, and an impact assessment undertaken. A report will be presented to Heads of Government of CARICOM countries.
